John Vandore, Manager of the Cryox Brand – Cryogenic Technology from the Science and Technology Facilities Council (STFC)

E: john.vandore@stfc.ac.uk

John studied Engineering, later adding an MBA, and from an initial career in Product Planning and International Sales and Marketing in the automotive industry, he moved into General Management in Flow Control, running and acquiring manufacturing and distribution companies in the UK and North America.

Back in the UK, John bought into a small Cryogenics company in Oxfordshire, and is centrally involved in the exceptional Cryogenic Community in the UK and internationally.

Network Navigators provided through Oxfordshire Business Support are also available for Digital, Media and Publishing, Investment, Life Sciences, Low Carbon, SME Support, Space and Satellite Applications and Social Enterprise.

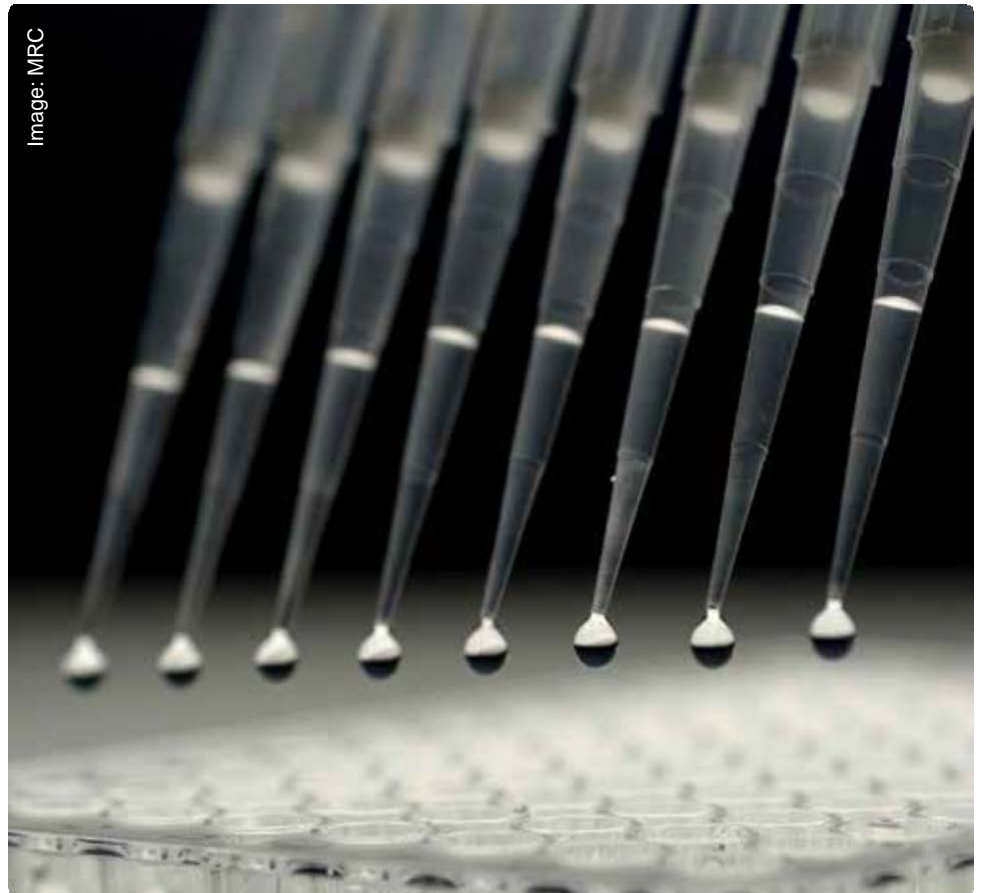

CRYOGENICS IN OXFORDSHIRE

- Over thirty organisations in Oxfordshire are engaged directly in cryogenics, accounting for over 1000 employees and £1 billion economic activity.
- A world-leading triangle of research laboratories, academia and industry, including Clarendon Laboratory, Oxford Instruments and Rutherford Laboratory, brought the world's first MRI scanners and the most successful cryocooler technology flown in space.
- An exceptional concentration of this enabling technology has evolved around Oxford and is unmatched anywhere else in the world, which has resulted in sought-after specialists at all levels.
- The British Cryogenics Cluster, centred on Oxford, has the potential to drive further exciting new developments including The Dearman Engine, powered by Liquid Air, as part of the wider 'Liquid Air Economy'.

About Network Navigators

The Network Navigator's role is to ensure that anyone seeking help is signposted to the support they need and to work together to build an environment that encourages and supports innovation.

The Network Navigator for Cryogenics in Oxfordshire is John Vandore.
